Edmonton has enough money for LRT: Redford

Tapped out. Alberta Premier claims province has paid its dues, compares Southeast line to Rogers Place

 ryan.tumilty@metronews.ca

Premier Alison Redford said the province is providing plenty of funding to the city for the Southeast LRT project and if the city shifts priorities it can make it happen.

Redford said the provincial government provides money through the Municipal Sustainability Initiative and the Green Trip program that could be allocated to the project, and it is up to local governments to decide what their priorities are.

"Six months ago, for the City of Edmonton, it was the arena, and so they committed some of their provincial money to that," she said. "At the end of the day, it's not about me deciding whether the Southeast LRT is a priority for Edmonton."

The $1.8-billion LRT line, which would run from Mill Woods to downtown, was delayed last fall because the city is still waiting for money from the provincial and federal governments.

The city has committed $800 million to the project and has an additional $250 million committed from the federal government along with $235 million left unallocated in the province's Green Trip program, which it hopes to put toward the project.

That still leaves the project $515 million short, with the city hoping $150 million will come from the federal government and $365 million will come from the province.

Redford said the province is watching its own bottom line and she can't commit the funds.

"The provincial government needs to make responsible spending decisions; it is not a bottomless pit of money," she said.

Redford said she is hoping for a new, more modern relationship with the province's big cities that might help advance LRT plans, but any conversation about new tax powers would also have to include reductions in provincial transfers.

Latest regulations

Pharmacy technicians have met new standards: AHS

Alberta Health Services officials are working to alleviate fears that new regulations for pharmacy technicians will lead to complications with providing prescription drugs to patients.

Concerns had been raised by workers and a representing association that a new regulation test for those responsible for filling and organizing drug orders could lead to mass job losses and result in a lack of capable staff. But AHS says in a statement provided to Metro that 94 per cent of 800 technicians working in the province have successfully passed the regulation test. METRO

North Edmonton

Man arrested following string of robberies at gunpoint

A 39-year-old man is currently in police custody following a string of violent robberies in north Edmonton Saturday.

On Jan. 11, police responded to the scene of a stolen car after the vehicle's owner had been held at gunpoint and his car and smartphone were taken.

Shortly after the first incident, EPS were called to a second robbery at gunpoint at a nearby bank. At approximately 11:30 a.m., just 40 minutes after the first attack, a second bank notified police of another robbery. METRO

After straddling on and off the market for close to two years, the most expensive home sold in Edmonton for 2013 was scooped up for a cool $3.4 million.

"When the buyer came by,

I wasn't surprised at all," said Mary-Anne Lee, the seller's agent and local realtor with Marv Sather Real Estate. "The home was such a well-built dream home and I thought somebody should have it."

The 3,000-square-foot home, with walkout basement and a chef-worthy kitchen, took just over three years to build, Lee added.

Realtors' Association of Edmonton spokesperson Jon Hall said while the sale of million-dollar homes in the city is on the up the time it takes to sell a home varies greatly.

"Ten to 15 years ago, a million-dollar home was exceptional," he said, adding in 2013 the fastest million-dollar home was sold in four days, while it took 14 months to sell another.

A chilly success

Deep Freeze sets in.
Annual winter festival taken over by Vikings

Lumbering Vikings were aplenty this weekend at Edmonton's seventh annual Deep Freeze festival.

With the theme "The Vikings are Coming," Edmonton's winter event featured members from Odin's Ravens, a Viking-age historical re-enactment group based in the city to give spectators a taste of the past.

Sarah Nelin, a member of Odin's Ravens for the last two years, said the reaction from the crowd at Deep Freeze was amazing.

"Vikings are popular right now," she laughed, adding Odin's Ravens combines two of her favourite passions.

"I love history and I love dressing up and those are two things that the Odin's Ravens do and that just worked out really well for me," Nelin said.

Festival director Christy Morin said the Vikings really stole the show and with more than 20,000 people attending on Saturday alone, they gave Edmontonians a good look at what Odin's Ravens are all about.

"The Viking theme has been phenomenal," she said. "They've taken over the site."

With warmer weather conditions, Morin said the festival's different events, including ice carving and a three-on-three street-hockey tournament, went off without a hitch.

"I love (to see) the partners coming together," Morin added.

"I love the flavour of both days, they are just so similar, but different in that there is such a strong cultural group that we get to work together with."

"Edmonton was ready to come out and enjoy the winter," she added.

Kindergarten math: 1+1 = not enough money now

Premier Alison Redford says full-day kindergarten in Alberta is a matter of when, not if.

After saying earlier this month that she was unsure when she would be able to live up to the promise she first made during her leadership campaign, Redford reiterated that she still believes the program is important.

"I have no second thoughts about it. I think full-day kindergarten is absolutely important to Albertans and it's important for early childhood development," she said.

Redford said the cost of bringing in the program is just one the province can't bear at the moment and in the short term she doesn't see how that could change.

"We really have fallen under some difficult challenges with respect to the bitumen bubble," she said.

Several school boards offer limited full-day kindergarten programs now, but the programs are funded through charitable programs or through parents paying for half the cost.

Redford said she hasn't changed her mind that the program is important, but the province has a lot of things it needs to balance.

"There are lots of issues in this province that are fundamentally important and we are balancing the use of our resources the best way we possibly can." RYAN TUMILTY/METRO

In Canada

Ontario, B.C., Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and P.E.I. offer full-day programs, while Newfoundland, Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan do not.

- The province has estimated funding full-day kindergarten would cost $200 million a year.

Premier Alison Redford reiterated her commitment to full-day kindergarten, but said the province needs to find the funds. METRO FILE

'Creepy' new app can ID you at the snap of a photo

NameTag. The app can spot and match a face in seconds

KATE WEBB
Metro in Vancouver

A new facial recognition app that allows anyone to instantly look up social media and dating profiles of someone whose photo they snap has been denounced by Canadian privacy watchdogs as "creepy" and "dangerous."

Creators of the app, called NameTag, say it can spot a face using Google Glass' camera or an Android phone, send it to a server, compare it to millions of online records and in seconds return a match complete with a name, additional photos and social media profiles.

The developer, FacialNetwork.com, says it is working on making the system compatible with dating sites such as PlentyOfFish.com, OkCupid.com and Match.com, and that it will also be able to identify people with a criminal history.

Google Glass does not currently support facial recognition apps because of privacy concerns, but the app's developers are hoping to change that. In the meantime there will be several other ways to access it once it is released in the spring. Anyone with a photo of a stranger will be able

Facial recognition

Heather Ormerod, a spokesperson for the Privacy Commissioner of Canada, said that since neither the app nor Google Glass are currently available in Canada, her office has yet to examine it in depth.

- The technology is already used by some Canadian stores to stop known shoplifters from entering, and by governments, high-security buildings and banks to verify identities.
- Facial recognition technology is not illegal in Canada, but privacy commissioners have prohibited its use, such as when the Insurance Corporation of B.C. offered it to police to help them identify Stanley Cup rioters.

to log in to the NameTag website or use a device that supports the app. They can upload the photo and discover the subject's Facebook, Twitter, and LinkedIn accounts, as well as dating profiles.

The app's creator, Kevin Alan Tussy, said in a statement that people who do not wish to be identified will be able to log onto the website and opt out of being searchable. WITH FILES FROM TORSTAR NEWS SERVICE

Watchdog warning

App leaves door wide open for stalkers and predators

Popular children's entertainer and advocate Raffi Cavoukian, whose sister Ann Cavoukian is Ontario's privacy commissioner, began tweeting about NameTag as soon as news of it reached him this week.

He is the founder of the B.C.-based Centre for Child Honouring, and co-founded the Red Hood Project, a movement for consumer protection for children, in the wake of the Amanda Todd tragedy.

He has also written a book about Internet privacy called Lightweb, Darkweb: Three Reasons To Reform Social Media Before It Re-Forms Us.

He said NameTag's promise to protect minors rings hollow.

"It's impossible," he said. "You can't know how old someone is online in social media.... Millions of parents, and this is well known, lie about their kids' age, and put them on Facebook much younger than 13."

His Red Hood Project co-founder, Vancouver-based activist Sandy Garossino, has been calling for years on the federal government to force social media companies to require age verification.

Metro is awaiting answers from NameTag spokeswoman Jordan McGee about how the app can assure that minors will not be searchable in the absence of mandatory age verification by social media companies.

But even beyond concerns about children's safety, Garossino said the app should raise major red flags for women everywhere.

"Guys will use this to identify women that they want to find out more about and meet," she said. "So it is clear this opens the doors wide to stalking.... For girls and women this is actually a real and present danger."

"The public should be getting extremely angry about this, and women need to stand up and say, 'This is not on, our faces are not your property. Your right to invade my space stops at my face.'"

MARS ONE: SNAPSHOTS

Justin Semenov, one of 1,058 people from around the world, shortlisted for the Mars One project. MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO IN SASKATOON

Seventy-five Canadians are among the 1,058 finalists shortlisted for a one-way mission to the red planet with Mars One. Here's a look at one of the candidates.

In the running

Waking up at 5:30 a.m. for a light breakfast of a bagel, a handful of trail mix and a variety of vitamins, Justin Semenov is a pretty normal guy.

A skilled blacksmith, a father of one son and a combat engineer with the Canadian Forces, you wouldn't take a second look at Semenov when he's shopping at Co-op in Saskatoon's Stonebridge neighbourhood or while he's out for a bicycle ride. But there's something unusual about this 35-year-old Saskatchewanian.

Semenov, alongside 75 other Canadians, has been shortlisted from among 200,000 applicants as a candidate for the Mars One project — an ambitious endeavour with a goal to launch the first human colony on the Red Planet in 2025.

Describing himself as not a "hugely public person," Semenov points out that being shortlisted has taught him skills and prompted him to want to become an ambassador for the mission.

An hour after breakfast, Semenov travels from his condominium to what he calls his "second home" — Diekema Martial Arts in downtown Saskatoon. Semenov generally trains two to three hours per session, three times a week.

"It falls into the same category as family. How do you get up and leave them forever?" he asked, as sweat poured down his face.

"But with great accomplishment comes great responsibility and sacrifice ... I'll focus on that when — and if — that time even comes." MORGAN MODJESKI/METRO IN SASKATOON

Gay man jailed for sending text message dies

Cameroon. Lawyer blames government for 34-year-old's death following a hernia

A gay man in Cameroon who was jailed for sending a text message to another man saying "I'm very much in love with you," and who was later declared a prisoner of conscience by Amnesty International, has died, according to a lawyer who worked on his case.

Roger Jean-Claude Mbende, 34, died Friday roughly one month after his family removed him from the hospital where he had been seeking treatment for a hernia, lawyer Alice Nkom said.

"His family said he was a curse for them and that we should let him die," she said.

Mbende was arrested in March 2011 in connection with the text message and convicted the following month under a Cameroonian law that imposes up to five years in prison for homosexual acts. He received a three-year sentence.

Cameroon brings more cases against suspected gays than any other African country, according to Human Rights Watch. The rights group said in a March 2013 report that at least 28 people had been charged under the law in the past three years.

Mbende developed the hernia while in prison. In July 2012, he was granted provisional release on medical grounds, according

"I accuse the state," said Nkom. "If there had not been criminalization of homosexuality, he would not have gone to prison and his life would not be over ..."

International deal

Iran agrees to slow down, open up nuclear program

Iran has agreed to limit uranium enrichment and to open its nuclear program to daily inspection by international experts starting Jan. 20, setting the clock running on a six-month deadline for a final nuclear agreement, officials said Sunday.

In exchange, the Islamic Republic will get a relaxation of the financial sanctions that have been crippling its economy.

The announcement that Iran and six world powers (Britain, China, France, Germany, Russia and the U.S.) had agreed on the plan for implementing an interim agreement came first from Iranian officials and was later confirmed elsewhere. Some U.S. lawmakers have been leery of the deal.

Former Israeli prime minister Ehud Olmert stands in front of the coffin of former Israeli prime minister Ariel Sharon at the Knesset plaza in Jerusalem on Sunday. Sharon, the hard-charging Israeli general and prime minister who was admired and hated for his battlefield exploits and ambitions to reshape the Middle East, died Saturday, eight years after a stroke left him in a coma from which he never awoke. He was 85. ODED BALILTY/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Israelis offer final goodbyes to Ariel Sharon

'There will never be anyone else like him.' Former comrades, political allies and regular citizens flock to Jerusalem to pay respects to late leader

Israelis from all walks of life flocked to parliament Sunday to catch a glimpse of Ariel Sharon's coffin and pay their final respects to the iconic former prime minister and general.

A stream of visitors ranging from former army comrades to political allies to citizens who only knew him from afar remembered Sharon as a decisive leader, for better or for worse, and one of the final heroes of Israel's founding generation.

"Those who didn't know him from up close can't truly understand what a legend he was," said a choked-up Shlomo Mann, 68, who served under Sharon's command in the 1973 Mideast war. "There will never be anyone else like him."

The 85-year-old Sharon died Saturday, eight years after a stroke left him in a coma.

In a career that stretched across much of Israel's 65-year existence, his life was closely intertwined with the country's history. As one of Israel's most famous generals, the man known as "Arik" was renowned for bold tactics and an occasional refusal to obey orders. To his supporters, he was a war hero; to his critics, a war criminal.

As prime minister late in life, he was embraced by the public as a grandfatherly figure who provided stability in times of turmoil.

A state memorial is planned for Monday at parliament, followed by a funeral service at Sharon's ranch in southern Israel. U.S. Vice-President Joe Biden, former British Prime Minister Tony Blair and others are expected to attend the ceremonies. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Ford an honorary American? Thanks, but no thanks

An online petition to make Toronto Mayor Rob Ford an honorary U.S. citizen hasn't garnered much support so far. CHRIS YOUNG/THE CANADIAN PRESS

A petition to make Toronto Mayor Rob Ford an honorary U.S. citizen hasn't garnered much support so far.

The petition appears on the White House website under the headline: "Proclaim Robert Bruce 'Rob' Ford, the 64th Mayor of Toronto, An Honorary Citizen of the United States of America."

Four people had signed it by Sunday afternoon.

The petition had been on the website since Jan. 3, and even though it had received a bit of media attention, that didn't exactly appear to have spurred a great public stampede toward the cause.

The tongue-in-cheek petition says: "(Ford) has at once demonstrated an exceptional proclivity to act for the greater good and been the subject of horrifying political attacks. The evidence demonstrates the attacks are motivated by Mayor Ford's unwavering adherence to good governance over the interests of his political opponents."

It goes on to say, "Mayor Ford is clearly a hero of humanity who deserves the very best. We therefore petition (President Barack) Obama to declare Mayor Ford an Honorary Citizen of the United States."

As of Sunday afternoon, the petition was 99,996 signatures short of the 100,000 required to get a White House response.

THE CANADIAN PRESS

That's no moon, it's a petition

The White House instituted the 100,000-signature requirement after it had been hit with spoof petitions — demanding America build a "Star Wars-style Death Star."

- The White House had to politely, and jokingly, inform people that it was not fiscally feasible in a time of budget constraints.

Researchers at the University of Alberta want to find out if the blood pressure devices that are located in many pharmacies produce comparable measurements to 24-hour blood pressure measurements (considered the gold standard).

If these devices are comparable, patients may be able to be managed using readings from their local pharmacy instead of having to go to their doctor's office to have their readings taken.

Syria. Rebel infighting leaves nearly 700 dead

Rebel-on-rebel clashes have killed nearly 700 people over the past nine days in northern Syria in the worst bout of infighting among the opponents of President Bashar Assad since the country's civil war began, activists said Sunday.

The fighting pits the al-Qaida-linked Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant (ISIL) against several Islamist and more moderate rebel brigades. The ISIL muscled its way into opposition-held territory in northern Syria last spring, co-opting some weaker rebel brig-

Students fight security forces ahead of key vote

Egypt. More than 52 million voters to decide whether to support amendments to the constitution

Hundreds of students supporting Egypt's ousted president battled security forces Sunday at three Cairo universities, two days before a referendum that officials say will be protected by a massive deployment of soldiers and police.

The clashes came as Egypt's Interim President Adly Mansour urged voters to head to the polls to cast ballots Tuesday and Wednesday on the draft constitution. Mansour said that the draft charter used "moderate" Islam as a base for legislation. He also asked voters "to lead the ship of the nation to the shores of safety."

Egypt's more than 52 million voters will decide whether to support amendments to the constitution initially drafted under toppled Islamist president Mohammed Morsi. Two panels dominated by secular-leaning politicians and legal experts rewrote the document.

A large turnout and a strong "yes" vote would give legitimacy and a boost to a military-backed plan for presidential and parliamentary elections.

On Sunday, Morsi's Muslim Brotherhood group and its allies stepped up confrontations in the streets ahead of the vote. Students at Cairo and Ain Shams universities marched off campus, burned tires and blocked main roads. Riot police fired tear gas and students responded by hurling stones. In one incident, witnesses say the students set a police vehicle and a traffic post on fire.

Students at the Islamic Al-Azhar University also protested. Police arrested 19 protesters for blocking traffic, said a security official.

The military and police will deploy hundreds of thousands of soldiers and officers — including special forces commandos — to guard the vote.

Mansour also ordered a change to Egyptian law to now punish those found guilty of illegally casting a ballot with up to 15 years in prison.

Put eggs in more than one basket

HOW TO ROLL
Alison Griffiths
metronews.ca

There has never been a better time to be defensive with stock market investments. Record highs of more than 25 per cent gains were reached in the American markets in 2013. Even though Canada and Europe lag, whatever happens to the U.S. in terms of a market decline will definitely affect everyone else.

An asset allocation will protect you by taking the emotion out of investing. You follow the asset allocation, not the fears, hopes and predictions littering the money world.

In 1990, Dr. Harry Markowitz won a Nobel Prize in economics after proving that diversified portfolios (don't put all your eggs in one basket) maximize return while minimizing risk.

In the end, minimizing risk is the single most important investing goal.

An asset allocation apportions your money among cash (GICs, high interest accounts), bonds and equities. The first two are often lumped together and called fixed income.

Cash is a good place to start. Its role is to cope with emergencies inside and outside a portfolio. Those outside the portfolio include unexpected expenses. Let's assume that your 100-per-cent equity portfolio dropped 40 per cent in 2008-09, but you needed to withdraw some funds. Without cash you would have had to sell investments at a huge loss.

Cash inside your port-

In case of emergency

100%

The role of cash is to cope with emergencies inside and outside a portfolio. Let's assume that your 100-per-cent equity portfolio dropped 40 per cent in 2008-09, but you needed to withdraw some funds. Without cash you would have had to sell investments at a huge loss.

folio also allows you to tweak your asset allocation during times of stock market emergencies. Say you chose an allocation of 15 per cent cash, 35 per cent bonds and 50 per cent equities. When the markets were slammed in 2008-09, the percentage in equities declined dramatically.

Cash offered the chance to buy more equities and bring the percentage back closer to 50 per cent. Here's where an asset allocation really shines. If 50 per cent equities is your chosen amount, when it drops to, say, 35 per cent you don't fret about whether it's time to buy back into the market. You just do it based on the percentages.

Anyone who used cash to follow a chosen asset allocation during the various market declines over the past 20 years is sitting pretty now.

Rocker compares oilsands to Hiroshima

Canadian rock icon Neil Young launched a blistering attack on the Harper government and Alberta's oilsands at a news conference on Sunday, saying that he was "shattered" after visiting a Fort McMurray industrial site he compared to the atomic bomb-devastated wreckage of Hiroshima, Japan.

Joined on the Massey Hall stage by representatives from the Athabasca Chipewyan First Nation, Young was especially scathing in his criticism of Prime Minister Stephen Harper's "hypocritical" administration, which Young said was ignoring science to irresponsibly drive corporate profits.

Young was speaking hours before he was set to take the same stage for a concert, the proceeds of which were to be directed to the Athabasca Chipewyan First Nation Legal Fund. The Athabasca Chipewyan First Nation represents a community living roughly 200 kilometres downstream of current oilsands development. The group is embroiled in a legal battle to protect their traditional territory from further industrialization.

HIT UP THE PAYROLL FOR REVENUE

Edmonton has operating and capital costs that benefit people who do not live here. This is a parasitical relationship. For example, today thousands of individuals will come into the city from St. Albert, Sherwood Park, Beaumont, Leduc and other communities. They will drive on roads cleared of snow with Edmontonians' tax dollars. They will earn their daily bread and then go home. As far as the city's finances go, they take, but do not give. That's what has spurred the discussion of amalgamating Edmonton's bedroom communities.

Amalgamation isn't going to happen. Even if it did, it would not solve Edmonton's revenue challenges. The amalgamation that took place in Toronto didn't result in any savings and created even greater fiscal challenges. So maybe it's time we looked at a different approach to financing cities in Alberta.

URBAN COMPASS
Terence Harding
edmonton@metronews.ca

Almost 5,000 jurisdictions in the United States have a local income tax. It's a given that the provincial government will not consider any new taxes and it will not give taxation powers to cities. But the Municipal Government Act is under review and perhaps we could discuss exchanging one kind of tax for another.

If we were to forego property taxes in favour of some sort of provincial payroll tax that would go to the jurisdiction where the income was earned, we might end up in better financial shape. There are certainly models we could look at. San Francisco levies a 1.5 per cent payroll tax on businesses with payrolls in excess of $250,000. However, that is on top of property taxes. That would be a non-starter here. But a payroll tax alone might have some merit.

The median full-time salary in Edmonton is about $50,000. A 3.5 per cent payroll tax would generate $1,750,

Why not?

which is about equal to the taxes on a house valued at about $300,000. The more money one earned, the greater the amount that the city would receive.

There would be some real benefits to this kind of approach. The first is that it would be fairer than using property value as the basis of taxation and would benefit those who are house rich but cash poor. But more importantly, it would enable Edmonton to receive revenue from those who work in the city but do not live here. In addition, as the city grows and more people work here, revenues would go up accordingly. This is an approach worth discussing.

3D printing has been a tech buzzword for the past few years, and 2013 saw the phenomenon subjected to equal parts hype and hyperbole (3D-printed guns, anyone?). However, based on the offerings on display at this year's Consumer Electronics Show, 2014 may be the year when 3D printers become stable enough, user-friendly enough and cheap enough to make it into the mainstream. Here are just a few of the 3D printers that made waves at this year's CES:

MakerBot Z18:

MakerBot is definitely the company to beat when it comes to commercial 3D printers, and the Z18 is its new flagship. Capable of printing objects 12 inches wide and 18 inches tall, it's one of the largest printers on the market. It will retail for $6,499 US and come with access to MakerBot's digital store, billed as the iTunes of 3D printing.

ChefJet:

Billed as a 3D printer for foodies, the ChefJet can print candy, frosting and sugary garnishes. It comes with its own user-friendly software and retails for an estimated $5,000.

The da Vinci:

A budget entry by XYZprinting Inc., the da Vinci was one of the most affordable printers at CES. It's expected to ship by mid-March and will sell for a paltry $499.

Stars gather for one last big show before Oscar time

Golden Globes.

Less-polished little sister of awards ceremonies full of off-kilter moments

Metro World News in Hollywood

The stars of film and television packed the Beverly Hilton ballroom Sunday for the 71st Annual Golden Globe Awards. With the Academy Awards nominations just days away, the results from the Globes are expected to be a bigger factor than usual in this year's Oscar race.

While 12 Years a Slave lost out in its acting and directing categories, it won where it really counts, earning the Golden Globe for best drama and edging it ahead of main rival Gravity in the Oscar best picture race.

Amy Adams and Jennifer Lawrence certainly upped the chances for American Hustle, taking home best actress in a motion picture comedy and best supporting actress in a motion picture, respectively for David O. Russell's 1970s caper.

Leonardo DiCaprio earned his second career Golden Globe, taking home best actor in a comedy for the Wolf of Wall Street, making sure to poke fun at it being in the comedy category during his speech.

Matthew McConaughey and Cate Blanchett cemented their Oscar front-runner statuses with wins for Dallas Buyers Club and Blue Jasmine, respectively.

ALL PHOTOS JASON MERRITT/GETTY IMAGES

Amy Poehler and Tina Fey returned for a second year of hosting duties. Poehler also won best actress in a TV comedy for Parks and Recreation.

McConaughey's co-star, Jared Leto, also a favorite for an Oscar nomination and win, earned the best supporting actor in a drama award for his transformative role in Dallas Buyers Club, while Alfonso Cuarón earned a Globe for his visionary directing in Gravity.

In the TV categories, HBO's Liberace biopic, Behind the Candelabra, continued the awards dominance it started at the Emmys in September with wins for the film itself and star Michael Douglas, while Breaking Bad enjoyed a post-series finale victory lap, nabbing Globes for the series itself and for star Bryan Cranston.

Netflix's House of Cards earned its first Golden Globe, going to Best Actress in a TV Drama winner Robin Wright.

Jacqueline Bisset, who won for her supporting work in the TV miniseries Dancing on the Edge provided the first awkward moment of the night with a pause-filled acceptance speech during which she worked in a profanity and advice from her mother: "Go to hell, and don't come back."

But that was just the beginning in a night full of off-kilter moments. Best song winner Alex Ebert started off his speech by recounting a party encounter with presenter Sean Combs.

Top of the Lake star Elisabeth Moss opened her best actress in a miniseries or TV drama speech with a simple, overwhelmed expletive, and best screenplay winner Spike Jonze, startled by music swelling up to play him off, countered with "Hey wait, I just got started."

The Best of Tina and Amy:

Three of their best quips:

- "[Gravity is] the story of how George Clooney would rather float away into space and die than spend one more minute with a woman his own age."
- "For his role in Dallas Buyers Club, [Matthew McConaughey] lost 45 pounds. Or what actresses call being in a film."
- "We're going to get this show done in three hours, or as Martin Scorsese calls it, Act One."

Bryan Cranston wins best actor in a TV series drama for Breaking Bad.

Q&A. The Invention of Wings author, Sue Monk Kidd, tells Metro about the work that went into her latest hit

EMILY LAURENCE
Metro World News

It hasn't been out long at all and already Sue Monk Kidd's new book, The Invention of Wings, has landed itself on every "best" list (including ours) and been lauded by Oprah. The Secret Life of Bees author did it again. Alternating chapters between Sarah Grimke, a reluctant slave owner and her slave Hetty, The Invention of Wings captures the complexity of black-white friendships during the 1800s. Eavesdrop on our conversation with Kidd about the real-life Sarah Grimke and what Kidd found most disturbing about American slavery.

I didn't know until I read the author's note that Sarah and her sister were real women. What was it like discovering their stories and the fact that they've been overlooked historically?

It was definitely a surprise, especially since they lived in Charleston, where I was living at the time. I think they fell down a big crack in history and honestly, I imagine a lot of women fell in that crack.

When you were doing your research, did you come across any other women whose stories you were tempted to tell?

I'm sure there are so many, but I really focused on Sarah and Angelina immediately when I discovered they were some of the earliest females that were pioneers for women's rights. I knew I wanted to tell the story of an enslaved woman and her owner. That was the only strong feeling I had about the characters, and luckily I was able to find this character both in history and in my imagination.

What made you write about Sarah as opposed to Angelina?

I initially thought I would write about Angelina too, but it became unbalanced with too many voices, so then I had to choose. I pretty much knew all along that it would be Sarah. For some reason, I gravitated toward her story; probably because she struggled so much to find her voice, which I can relate to, especially as a writer.

It doesn't sound like it was a good time to be a woman —

black or white.

Exactly. That's one of the things I want people to take away from the book; how far we've come and how some of the greatest movements of the 20th century grew out of extraordinary movements in the 19th century.

There's so much historical detail in the book about the way urban slaves were treated. Was there anything you found especially upsetting when you were doing your research?

Everything I discovered was upsetting. There is a certain familiarity we think we have about slavery, but sometimes familiarity creates distance between us and the subject, which is not a good thing. It needs to be disturbing. I collected an enormous number of books about American slavery and also travelled to look at historical documents. A great deal of my research was in Charleston. The most disturbing thing I discovered was the work house. There were these houses (where slave owners) could pay to have their slaves worked, abused and controlled.

Hilary Duff and Mike Comrie. ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES

No fairy-tale ending for Duff and Comrie

Ah, weekends. The perfect time to relax, sleep in, and grab brunch. Or if you're a celebrity, get married or divorced. So here are this past weekend's notable unions and dissolutions. First up is Hilary Duff and ex-NHL star Mike Comrie, who announced in a statement over the weekend that they "have mutually decided to an amicable separation" and will "remain best friends and will continue to be in each other's lives." The two are parents to toddler Luca, of whom they'll have joint custody.

It certainly looks like an amicable split, with Hilary tweeting, "Mike and I are sitting here, we are so appreciative for all of your kindness & well wishes." She continued, "Not an easy day but we're getting thru it together."

Meanwhile, Pamela Anderson and pop culture footnote Rick Salomon (remember him? He's the guy who made Paris Hilton famous when he starred as the other half in that sex tape) announced their marriage over the weekend. "We're very happy," Pamela disclosed to E! "Our families are very happy and that's all that matters." It's the second marriage for the couple — to each other.

Bynes had made it clear via her lawyer that once she was out of treatment at a psychiatric facility she wanted to pursue a career in fashion.

Justin Bieber

Sheriff's deputies are investigating Justin Bieber for yet another neighbourly dispute that could land the Canadian pop star in court. Los Angeles County Sheriff's spokesman Steve Whitmore says Bieber has been named as a suspect in a misdemeanor vandalism and assault crime report for allegedly throwing eggs at a neighbour's home in their gated Calabasas neighbourhood Thursday evening. Whitmore says the 19-year-old allegedly egged the house while his neighbour and neighbour's daughter were on the balcony. He says they videotaped the incident. Whitmore says Bieber won't speak to deputies.

Push them out of the plane and stand back

Skydive Plane Parent.

We've heard of helicopter parenting, but Metro's columnist has a new approach — allowing your kids to be (gasp) independent

RELATIVE
Kathy Buckworth
Kathybuckworth.com

While watching a news segment on "Helicopter Parents," my daughter turned to me and said, "You're not a Helicopter Parent," which was not news to me. She continued, "You're more like a 'Skydive Plane Parent.' You push us out and don't look back." She paused and added, "You sometimes give us a parachute."

I am not sure if she meant this as a compliment or a complaint but I took it as the former.

Yes, I confess, I make my kids go to school when it's cold, but I don't think making your children go to school on a school day when it's safe to do so is pushing them out of a plane or otherwise. In fact, it is pretty much what we in the work world merely call "meeting expectations."

But maybe I'm harsh. I've also been known to let my son (then eight) start a dog walking business where he had to (gasp) walk the dogs on his own around our quiet neighbourhood. This resulted in calls from concerned parents that he was on his own (of course to which my response was, "I hope he had a dog with him or he's fired").

At age nine I let him ride his bike to school, by himself, crossing a busy intersection.

My 11- and 14-year-olds routinely get themselves breakfast, make their lunch and get out to the bus or walk to school when both my husband and I have to leave the house hours before they do.

They've been going to public washrooms by themselves since they could figure out the "M" versus "W" signs on the doors.

When my 14-year-old informed me I had to miss going out to a long-planned evening event because she needed me to help her study, as she had procrastinated, I answered with, "Are you new here?"

I had a good time at the event, thanks for asking.

I'm not always that mean. My 19-year-old son had his wallet and phone stolen in New Zealand, and I did help him. I cancelled the phone and his credit card.

Do these actions make me a "Skydive Plane Parent"? OK then. I push them, they keep coming back. Replace that umbilical cord with a rip cord. Give them the chance to exceed your expectations. KATHY BUCKWORTH IS THE AUTHOR OF I AM SO THE BOSS OF YOU: A 8-STEP GUIDE TO GIVING YOUR FAMILY THE BUSINESS

You'll be surprised to find the abundance of nutrients that exist in this delicious and attractive salad.

The spinach, butternut squash and pomegranate seeds give you a trio of daily required vitamins and minerals. Spinach contains antioxidants that can fight cataracts, heart disease and certain cancers. Butternut squash is an excellent source of vitamin A, which gives you better skin and better eyesight. Pomegranates are known to help combat prostate cancer and Type 2 diabetes.

To access the seeds from a pomegranate, slice horizontally and, over a bowl, tap the skin-covered half with a wooden spoon until the seeds release.

The candied toasted almonds give you a special treat when you bite into this salad and they are so easy to achieve. You can prepare these nuts in advance and keep them stored in any airtight container.

This salad explodes with flavour and super foods but you can add some grilled protein, such as chicken, fish or meat, to make it a complete meal. If meat isn't your thing, you can add one cup of cooked grains such as quinoa or brown rice.

Directions

1. Preheat oven to 375 F. Line two baking sheets with foil and lightly coat with cooking spray.

2. Almonds: rinse with cold water. Drain but do not let dry. Place them in a bowl and add the 3 tbsp of brown sugar, cinnamon, nutmeg and ground ginger. Toss to coat. Spread out

Need a lesson on leaving that lump alone? You've got Gail!

All hail Gail.

Canada's reigning queen of cash Gail Vaz-Oxlade imparts some serious cents to today's students Canadians have come to know Gail Vaz-Oxlade as the no-nonsense provider of penny pinching wisdom on TV shows Til Debt Do Us Part, Princess and most recently, Money Moron. The Jamaica-born mother of two has written a library of books on the topic of bad spending, and she's now focusing her attention on today's cash-confused post-secondary students and their parents. In this excerpt from her new book, Saving for School, Vaz-Oxlade uses hypothetical students Sonny and Darling to explain how they and their parents can best handle a lump sum of moola, the likes of which could come from a scholarship, a bursary or a summer spent saving.

Here are the steps to help Darling and Sonny make a plan for how they'll use their lump-sum money.

Step 1

List all the money they'll have from summer employment, scholarships, bursaries, RESPs (the annual lump sum they'll withdraw), gifts from relatives and loans, along with any other money they can scrounge.

With plenty of studying to be done, post-secondary students often leave financial planning on the back burner. Preparing a game plan before hitting the books is key to graduating without a grievous student debt load. iStock

Step 2

List the money they know they'll need to cover tuition, books and supplies, travelling to school at the beginning of the year and home again at the end (along with all the trips home in between), first and last months' rent or residence expenses, and the first grocery shop or student food plan.

Step 3

Figure out an amount to set aside for emergencies. Do not skip this step. Emergencies happen. That's a part of life. Being financially prepared for them means Darling and Sonny will have options in terms of how they deal with those balls from left field. Being unprepared is immature and short-sighted. I recommend at least $500. Make sure you talk about what constitutes an emergency; not everything is worthy of emergency status, no matter how dramatic Sonny or Darling may be.

An emergency is something that threatens your health or ability to continue

Money on our minds

- Look out for features written by Gail Vaz-Oxlade in Metro in the weeks ahead, and keep your eyes peeled for her weekly column, which will debut on Feb. 3.

More bang for your buck?

- Readers can visit metronews.ca to find more content from this excerpt, including advice on how to work out a plan for spending school money in the best possible way.
- Gail's Student Lump-Sum Money Worksheet will also be available for download.

and Sonny need to take responsibility for managing it. You do want them to act like grown-ups, right? Then you must treat them as such. That means if they blow all their "emergency" money on beer and then their laptop dies, you keep your hands out of your pockets.

Step 4

Subtract what needs to be spent from the lump-sum amount and divide the remainder by the number of months at school to give you the amount that will cover monthly expenses. If Darling and Sonny are in a traditional program that lasts eight months of the year (leaving them with four months to work and make money for the next year), they'll have to figure out their budget for eight months. So take whatever is left after the lump-sum calculation and divide it by eight. Some people do school all year round, in which case you'd have to stretch that money over 12 months.

If there's no money left after the lump-sum exercise, work will be a must. There are all sorts of ways for kids to make money or reduce their expenses. Both my editor, Kate, and Alex's BFF, Callie, were residence dons, which meant their room and board were covered.

Kids shelve books at libraries, serve coffee and make sandwiches, or work retail. There are some programs that are so intensive that a part-time job isn't an option, in which case maybe Mommie and Pops will pony up with some money to help on a monthly basis.

If there is money left, dividing it up sensibly is the only way to make it last. Regardless, you need to have some sense of where that money is going to go each month.

Riddle's halfpipe evolution continues ahead of Sochi

Skiing. Edmonton native takes silver medal at U.S. Grand Prix

Edmonton's Mike Riddle didn't have the best weather conditions to work with, but he still took second place in ski halfpipe at the U.S. Grand Prix.

Riddle scored 85.2 points, 3.8 points behind American David Wise who finished first on a snowy Sunday in Breckenridge, Colo., that made the halfpipe a little slower than usual.

"The conditions were not ideal," said Riddle. "It was snowing pretty hard and the pipe was slow. But it was good enough to get a final run down."

The 27-year-old says the weather forced him to stick to his regular routine, which included a double 1260 upon entering the pipe, and a switch alley-oop 520 to cap the run.

"It's a stock run for me," said Riddle. "The run I'm work-

Justin Dorey of Calgary was sixth with 76.4 points while Vancouver's Simon d'Artois placed seventh with 74.4.

On the women's side, American Maddie Bowman had a solid first run to hold off Ayana Onozuka of Japan. Calgary's Megan Gunning was the top Canadian with 78.66 points, good for ninth place.

The event organizers were able to stage the ski halfpipe event despite the snowy conditions. High wind led officials to

No 2nd chances for Oilers in Chicago

Marian Hossa celebrated his 35th birthday by helping his teammates out after an unlucky break.

Hossa had a power-play goal and an assist, and the Chicago Blackhawks beat the Edmonton Oilers 5-3 on Sunday night to end a three-game losing streak.

Hossa's 17th goal came on a 5-on-3 advantage in Chicago's dominant second period, and just 29 seconds after teammate Patrick Kane inadvertently bounced a pass off the boards and into an empty net during a delayed penalty call. Edmonton's Boyd Gordon was credited with a fluke short-handed goal that tied it 2-2.

No problem for Hossa, who helped his team move on by quickly regaining the moment for the Blackhawks.

"That type of thing happens once in a while, and we did a good job of bouncing back," Hossa said. "We got a big one the next shift."

Ben Smith, Andrew Shaw, Jonathan Toews and Brent Seabrook also scored for Chicago, which had 15 goals in a three-game sweep of the season series against Edmonton.

Ales Hemsky and Taylor Hall also scored for Edmonton.

Chicago grabbed control with a three-goal second that gave them a 4-2 lead. Chicago outshot Edmonton 19-5 in the period.

"The second period again," Oilers coach Dallas Eakins said. "It's a little mind-boggling."

Peyton prevails over postseason pressure to earn rematch with Pats

NFL playoffs. Broncos hold off a 4th-quarter Chargers comeback to set up Brady vs. Manning Peyton Manning welcomed Wes Welker back into the line-up with a touchdown toss and the Denver Broncos narrowly avoided a repeat of their playoff slip from last year, advancing to the AFC championship game with a 24-17 win over the San Diego Chargers on Sunday.

The Broncos (14-3) controlled the game for three and a half quarters before Philip Rivers capitalized on an injury to cornerback Chris Harris Jr. to stage a comeback reminiscent of Baltimore's shocking win at Denver exactly a year earlier.

This time, however, Manning rescued the Broncos from the brink of another crushing collapse and sent them into the

"It's the Broncos versus the Patriots, and certainly Tom and I have played against each other a lot," Manning said after beating San Diego. "But when you get to the AFC championship, it's about two good teams that have been through a lot to get there."

Manning, in the playoffs for a record 13 seasons as a quarterback, ended a personal three-game post-season skid.

Horoscopes

Aries

March 21 - April 20

No matter how many times you have fallen short in the past you will succeed this week so make the most of it – show the world what a star you really are.

Taurus

April 21 - May 21

Don't listen to those who counsel caution. The only reason they don't want you to do anything adventurous is because they are worried it will make them look bad.

Gemini

May 22 - June 21

Your values will change in important ways over the next few days, especially in how you look at money. What you need to learn is that it's not what you earn that counts but what you do with what you've got.

Cancer

June 22 - July 23

Even if you disagree with someone on a point of principle you can still work together, so stay on good terms and seek a compromise solution.

Leo

July 24 - Aug. 23

You may know what you are after but you still need help in getting it. If you don't ask for assistance today you may find yourself being left behind on the work front.

Virgo

Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

The Sun is on your side and your confidence is high, so do something special over the next few days. By this time next week it won't be so easy to stand out, so give it your all, creatively and romantically, while you can.

Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

You may feel sorry for someone whose luck appears to have deserted them but you are still advised to keep your distance and not get personally involved.

Scorpio

Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

You seem to be more open towards strangers than usual and that's good because someone you meet over the next few days could become not just a friend but also a business partner.

Sagittarius

Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

Something will happen over the next 24 hours that makes you feel a lot better about your long-term prospects. It will also make you realize that wealth is as much a state of mind as anything else.

Capricorn

Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

The Sun remains in your birth sign only until the 20th, so you have a week to make things happen. You can still make things happen after that date but there will be more obstacles for you to overcome.

Aquarius

Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

You will take the chance to help someone in need and won't think twice about it. However, make clear that you expect them to look after themselves after that.

Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

You will leave your task to the last minute today – and because you have to act fast and without thinking will most likely make a good job of it. Living on the edge is OK but not all the time. SALLY BROMPTON
